"The plans of the trustees of the consolidated Astor, Lenox and Tilden libraries have not yet been given to the public, but it is extremely doubtful whether they contemplate more than the establishment of a great reference library in some accessible and central location; in other words, the continuance of their work on the same lines as at present. This will not do for the great need of the public. It is like establishing a great milk depot in

ENLARGEMENT. CYSTITIS.

The ablest pharmacists have always been among the most enthusiastic champlons of Paine's celery compound.

But if there is one man in this country better qualified than any other to decide upon the practical merits of a spring remedy, that man is Mr. J. J. Kearney, of the great wholesale drug house of Morrisson, Plummer & Co., of Chicago, He knows every prepared remedy, he deals in the finest drugs and chemicals, he is himself constantly employing the best chemists, he is the least likely of any man that could be named to be misled for a second in such matters, for there is no more thorough pharmacist than he in the country; he is amply able and does receive the advice of any physician he cares to consult.

And Mr. Kearney, with every remedy in the world at the discovery falliers side in the surface.

And Mr. Kearney, with every remedy in the world at his disposal, falling sick in the spring, chose Paine's celery compound!

It made him well!

The other day in the mail that brought its usual number of unsolicited, grateful testimonials from all parts of the country to the proprietors of this greatest of remedies, there came the following:

Gentlemen—Two years ago last spring on account of having been for several months under Bryant Park. The vast majority of people could not afford to come to it. Like water, gas, bread and milk, the book must be distributed to the homes. The mountain could not come to Mahomet. Mahomet must go to the mountain. Our experience shows this, and a glance at the map will show it.

shows this, and a glance at the map will show it.

"Should the consolidated libraries undertake our plan, we shall co-operate with them, and we are willing to be absorbed and become a part of their system. "Barkis is willin." The great reference library is needed, but it cannot do the greatest good to the greatest numbers. It must circulate books to do good, and it must do this upon our plan, and with our present plans we are willing and ready to work with others. We need also a small and well-selected reference library at each branch station.

small and well-selected reference library at each branch station.

"The working staff of the library is most efficient and consists mainly of intelligent, interesting and cultivated young women, who are enthusiastic in their work and become a most important factor in the work of the library. They have classes of their own in the study of English literature, and because of their training and experience are admirable aids to those who seek to use the library. It is the intention to make for teachers a list of books or any graded course of reading they may desire, and to help them in any other way, whatever they may suggest.

"To establish the new branches an immediate outlay of $300,000 would suffice. Even if new branches are not established we need such money to maintain and extend the present system. The time is now ripe for systematic work. Whatever is done should be done quickly and generously on a definite plan.

is done should be done quickly and generously on a definite pian.

"In other cities the work is done by public moneys appropriated by the cities. Every one of our libraries is a private gift from generous citizens. The city has of late years paid part of the cost of maintaining them, but only a part, and we cannot induce it to pay the whole. For that reason we have to throw ourselves upon your generosity."

a very severe strain, brought on by overwork, I was near complete nervous prostration and mental exhaustion. The character of my business is such that it requires a large amount of mental force, physical power and endurance. While in the condition referred to it happened to occur to me, knowing as I did of the large sales of Paine's celery compound, that it might be what I needed. I commenced taking it at once, and with most excellent results. Within a week I feit like my old self again, and after a month's time was in better condition physically than I had been for years, although I am naturally a strong, well man. Since that experience I have not hesitated to use Paine's celery compound liberally every spring.

As a spring medicine to be taken after ills which follow close confining and enervating work I do not believe it has an equal. I have recommended it to many others and so far as my experience goes it has always been taken with satisfactory results.

I am not usually enthusiastic over such matters but with a remedy of such merit as you

I am not usually enthusiastic over such matters, but with a remedy of such merit as you have, it seems to me that it is my duty to give ou this voluntary testimonial.

THE CONSOLIDATED LIBRARIES.

John L. Cadwalader, who spoke next, was introduced by the Mayor as the man to whom was chiefly attributable the union of the Lenox, the Astor and the Tidden libraries. Mr. Cadwalader, however, in his opening remarks modestly disclaimed the full responsibility for the union, and said he had only accomplished a small share therein. Continuing, he said: "New, so far as the New-York public library bodies are concerned, and so far as the criticisms go for not having great extensions of the public library system. I am not sure that, after all, New-York is so much to blame. I say this because no-body has ever asked het the have public libraries, no-body has ever asked het the have public libraries, no-body has ever livited her to a public feast of that kind, and nobody has ever laid before her a programme or theory in this direction of which she would not be ashamed.

Proceeding, Mr. Cadwalader said that however great was the excuse for the domaint public conscience in the past, the conditions at the present moment were very different. The three libraries which had become united, if they had three times the amount of money at their command that they now had, could not come into touch with the general public or attract a greater public interest than they did now. After speaking of the difficulties which had attended the union of the three libraries, the speaker said that at any rate the union had been attended with excellent results, and had been conducive to the general benefit of the reading public. In closing, Mr. Cadwalader said: "Finally, I venture to say that if, as a result of this meeting, or if, as a result of any revival of this subject, the dominance of the sadministration of which he is at the head than at the sale of Lieutenant Lehman's collection, and the chances are that their time, pains and money will be spent to good advantage. The collection is a large, as well as an interesting one, so that two afternoons have been set apart for its disposal. Tuesday and Wednesday next, at 3:15 p. m. The sale will be conducted at No. 366 Pitth-ave., near Thirty-fourth-st. To give prospective buyers, as well as others, a chance to examine the collection at leisure the porcelain, pottery and curios will be on free exhibition from now on until the sale occurs. When the ablest physicians and the best-informed pharmacists not only prescribe and recommend, but themselves use and find health in Paine's celery compound; when thousands of men and women in every walk of life, from the humblest to the most famous and honored, voluntarily go out of their way to tell others the great good Paine's celery compound has done them; the present great demand for the remedy is not to be wondered at.

Paine's celery compound, the best of all nerve invigorators and blood purifiers, will do more to bring back health and strength in April than many weeks of vacation taken later, when work drops from nerveless hands, and there is no alternative but to give up altogether.

As soon as the nerves have been regulated and their finely adjusted parts supplied with proper nourishment by Paine's celery compound, debility, neuralgia, rheumatism, eleeplessness and headaches disappear.

Paine's celery compound cures diseases due to nervous weakness or to a bad state of the blood. It is the one real spring remedy known to-day that never fails to benefit. Get Paine's celery compound, and only Paine's celery com-pound if you wish to be well!

THE AILSA MAY NOT BE RAISED. The raising of the Alisa, the Atlas Line steamship sunk at Fort Hamilton, is likely to be a very slow operation, if effected at all. A small quantity of the cargo has been recovered so far. Two lighters were moored on the wreck yesterday. The ship seems to lie in about the same position it was in the morning after it struck the beach.

The general impression among the p neighborhood is that the chances of raising the steamer are rapidly disappearing. The four weeks' immersion in sait water is likely to prevent the engines from being of much avail. The huil of the steamship is twenty years old, and rasing a sunken vessel of that class, upon a percentage, is not a piece of work especially attractive to wrecking companies.

BULLET IN THE SHOULDER, police say is a desperate crook, was shot in the shoulder about 9 c'clock last night while resisting arrest by Detective Sergeant J. J. McCarthy. Har-rington was taken to Bellevue Hospital a prisoner. The shooting occurred in front of No. 240 East Tenth-st. Detectives McCarthy and Weller were going through East Tenth-st, when they saw Har-rington and another man named James Wasace, alias Piggy Rea, acting in a suspicious manner. The detectives hid in a basement, and saw the two men go into a store at No. 240. They remained in the store a few minutes, talking to the woman who kept it. Wallace finally came out, and started across the street toward the basement where the detectives were hiding.

The detectives, thinking they had been recognized. jumped to the sidewalk and seized Wallace. He made a motion as if to draw a revolver, but was overpowered after a short struggle. A loaded revolver was taken from him. Weller held Wallace while McCarthy went to the store to arrest Harrington. The latter at sight of the detective uttered an oath, and as the detective grabbed him he cried: "Let go of me or I will kill you." At the same time he reached his hand toward his hip pocket. McCarthy, thinking Harrington was going to draw a pistol, drew his own revolver and in the struggle the weapon was discharged, the builet entering Harrington's right shoulder.

The detectives believe that Wallace is the burglar who on March 2 shot Frank Tuttle, of No. 494 Bedford-ave., Brooklyn, while committing a burglary at that house. Wallace was locked up at head-quarters. Both are ex-covicts. made a motion as if to draw a revolver, but was

A public meeting was held yesterday afternoon in hickering Hall, Fifth-ave, and Eighteenth-st., under the management of the New-York Free Cirating Library Society, for the purpose of an-incing the need of establishing at least ten more of the free circulating library in certain districts. This city has at present only a few such libraries, circulating something like 1,200,000 volumes a year. It is, however, estimated that if the circulation was at all proportionate to the popula-tion, at least 8,000,000 volumes should be distributed ery year. The body of the hall was well filled by a large audience interested in tension of the free circulating library system The meeting was delayed for a little time, awaiting the arrival of Mayor Strong, who, when he ascended the platform from the front, was greeted with cheers. In opening the meeting he apologized for his lateness by saying that the Mayor of New-York could not always control his own time, even on a Saturday afternoon. Continuing, he said: "It gives me great pleasure to be so honored as to be

EX-JUDGE HOWLAND'S ADDRESS. Mayor Strong called upon ex-Judge Howland to make the first address. In part Judge Howland said: "It will hardly be credited that, sixteen years ago, when this library was started, there was not a place in this city, the largest on the American Continent, where a person could get a book to read at home unless he bought it, paid for its use, borrowed nome unical it. It was almost the only city of the Union without a free public library, and was in this respect surpassed by almost every town and village in New-England, New-York and many other States. It was enriched by the great Astor and Lenox collections, which were somewhat inaccessible, and hedged around by such restrictions as to hours and the use of the books only in the library buildings that they were useless, save to the leisure class, the wealthy Chicago.

"Boston, seventh in population but first in library progress, has spent $2,368,000 for its Public Library, gives it over $200,000 yearly, has $600,000 volumes, and circulates by the help of nine branches and sixteen delivery stations, nearly 2,000,000 volumes. If we circulated proportionately, our circulation would be 8,000,000. Chicago, the second city, appropriates $12,000 public money yearly, and from its $200,000 volumes circulates, with thirty-eight branch

"Such a result is an evidence of the necessity of the establishment of a free circulating library, and of its beneficence to the public. The history of the nception and growth of the New-York institution most interesting. It originated with some charitable ladies who were giving lessons to a class of young girls and discovered that the favorite literature of the girls was picture-papers, ill-suited to young minds, but the only things they could get to read. An effort was at once made to collect suitable library, and in four months 1,522 volumes were collected, a room hired and the library opened. The demand exceeded the supply from the ond-ave., to the corporation. The circulation of the two libraries in that year was 201,000. In 1888 Miss Catherine Bruce presented another library, in memory of her father, George Bruce, situated at No. 226 West Forty-second-st., which represents an expenditure of at least $70,000 in the gift. The circulation of the three libraries that year was $20,605 volumes. Another branch, the gift of George Vanderbilt, was established in Jackson Square in 1888. The circuladon of the four libraries for the year was 423,363 A branch was opened in Harlem in 1892, in a rented room. The great and rapid growth of this branch is one of the most remarkable features in our history. In cramped and close quarters, with limited supply of books, the branch had such a femand for books that on one Saturday there was thing left on the shelves, except a book on pickles, a dictionary and a directory, which one applicant cald were wanting in interest and evincing lack of continuity of thought. During the last year, with 2,461 books, its circulation reached 96,341, and the cost of circulation, although the library had to pay ing the last year by 181,153 persons. Of the proposed twenty libraries, eight should
